University cuts The Tiger

Student newspaper shut down due to threat of lawsuit

by Tyrone Walker
head photographer

President Phil Prince has informed staff members that it is in the best interest of the students and the University to discontinue the publication of The Tiger. Prince said last week that he is disbanding the student newspaper in an effort to prevent any future lawsuits.

The decision stems from a lawsuit filed against CU by a former Clemson undergraduate student, who claimed that The Tiger published a defamatory article in the Oct. 27, 1994 issue.

The suit claims that a specific article was libelous because it reported allegations from a police report. By law, all information in a police report is considered to be confidential and restricted from publication.

The plaintiff's lawyer argued that since the University is the recognized publisher of the student-run newspaper, it is responsible for the paper's content.

"The University's decision is nothing less than censorship," said Terrell Johnson, former editor-in-chief of The Tiger.

Johnson claimed the suit was not the real reason for disbanding the newspaper, and she

New dorms to be demolished

by Christopher Nixon
staff writer

In a press announcement Tuesday afternoon, the Clemson Housing office stated that the new dorms, Holmes and McCabe, will be razed and replaced with exact duplicates of the old Johnstone buildings B and C.

The new Johnstone buildings will be constructed from the debris of the overpriced Holmes and McCabe buildings. When asked what prompted the decision, Jack McKenzie, director of public information, said that it will be more cost effective.

"The new buildings are costing the University more money than the students are paying," said McKenzie. "In lieu of raising the cost of housing for Clemson students again, we decided to tear down the new buildings and replace them with the cheaper Johnstone formats."

The Johnstone buildings were built in the 1940's to house military personnel during World War II. They were intended only for the war effort, not for permanent student housing. However, they were built well and have housed thousands of students since the war.

Tearing down the remaining

Johnstone buildings would be like "cutting the tail off the tiger; it just wouldn't look right," said McKenzie. "That's why we have decided to reimplement the Johnstone buildings and give tomorrow's Clemson student the same atmosphere the Clemson graduate experienced."

Holmes and McCabe are scheduled to be torn down in order to make room for the reconstruction of the old Johnstone Halls.

CU to become a military college for women only

by LaToya C. Greene
staff writer

In two years, Clemson will be converted to an all women's military college.

The decision developed from the debate concerning Shannon Faulkner's challenging lawsuit to gain admittance to the Citadel, a military school in Charleston geared towards males.

State legislators feel that there is a need for a women's military college of equal standing with the Citadel to balance frustrations stemming from recent controversies surrounding the all-male military institution.

This change will have a greater impact on Clemson's male students than on its female students. Currently, males comprise over half of the student population.

Preparations have already been made to transfer the University's male population to two other state institutions to complete their degrees. In-state males will be transferred to the Citadel while the out-of-state males will be admitted to USC in Columbia or its branches.

Faulkner has been accepted to Clemson; however, she has again found herself amongst a controversy. There is opposition to the transformation of the University.

Faulkner's brother, David, was denied admission to Clemson due to the new standards set forth by the state legislators. David Faulkner has filed a lawsuit against the state claiming that keeping him out of Clemson is a violation of his constitutional rights.

In a recent press conference, Shannon Faulkner commented on her brother's actions:

"I am greatly pleased with the transformation of Clemson University. It will be a great opportunity for females who want a military based education.

"As for my brother, I think that he is acting hastily and targeting himself as a troublemaker. However, it will pass. It's all good."

Cable installation stopped

by Rex Bickley
staff writer

While Clemson students were tanning, skiing and partaking of alternative beverages overspring break, plans for the campus-wide installation of cable television were again halted by the administration. This hold-up is attributed to numerous complaints by Clemson faculty.

Professors have complained to the administration that student attendance has declined since the installation of cable on campus. James F. Barker, dean of the future college of architecture, arts and humanities, stated, "I have heard from over half of my constituents that attendance in their classes has decreased by almost 25 percent."

Barker went on to say that the lack of attendance would not improve because "those frat boys haven't even gotten it yet." He was referring to the fraternity quads, which were scheduled to receive their cable installations within the next two to three weeks.

Residents on the east side of campus have had access for over a month. The shoeboxes received their cable installations along with all of the Johnstone sections. The decision to install cable in Johnstone first was made in hopes of providing the students that live there with something to keep their minds off the roaches and mice that share their accommodations, according to Jan Neelemyer, a resident assistant in Johnstone B.

The Johnstone building will also receive extra channels due to the "below average living arrangements," said Verna Howell, director of housing. The male sections will have cable installed with the Playboy Channel and HBO while the female sections will have access to extra fitness channels plus an allowance on the Home Shopping Network of $20.00 a month.

The fraternity quads, which were scheduled to be the last residents to receive cable, were to have the installations soon, but until the attendance matter is reviewed, cable has been postponed indefinitely in those areas.

President Phil Prince simply stated, "We just can't seem to get this darn cable thing licked."

Drinking improves grades

by LaToya C. Greene

Apparently, the threat of lead is not the biggest factor surrounding concern over CU's water. Researchers at Duke Power have recently disclosed information to Clemson officials and the surrounding community concerning the current condition of the University's water supply.

According to Joseph Greenwood, a chemical analyst at Duke Power, the University's water supply is highly contaminated with radioactive chemicals resulting from an accident which occurred three years ago.

Greenwood stated, "At the time of the initial contamination of the water, it wasn't believed to threaten the entire water supply.

"Our top specialists conducted several tests and, as a result, concluded that there was little need to publicize the occurrence and cause students unnecessary concern."

The radioactive chemicals were released into the water in late 1992 when one of the chambers storing the chemicals collapsed due to a malfunctioning oxide rod. The rod, responsible for maintaining an equilibrium temperature, overheated and caused an internal explosion.

"THE LONGER THE STUDENT HAS BEEN HERE, THE MORE WATER HE OR SHE HAS CONSUMED; THEREFORE RESULTING IN A SMARTER INDIVIDUAL."

• JOSEPH GREENWOOD CHEMICAL ANALYST

Due to recent discoveries, Duke Power, in conjunction with members of the Clemson family, were compelled to release information regarding the contaminated water.

The water has tested high in several analyses, and researchers at the plant are confident that the water has contaminated anyone and everyone who has consumed or utilized the University's water within the past three years. No deaths or injuries are known to date.

However, the recent discovery has uncovered a positive side effect. Apparently, over the past three years, students have experienced an increase in GPA and overall comprehension of material.

Greenwood stated, "Usually the consumption or intake of chemical substances is dangerous and life-threatening, but it seems as if this is an extreme exception. The longer the student has been here, the more water he or she has consumed, therefore resulting in a smarter individual."

Student opinions on the issue are fairly indifferent. Jervis Hough, a freshman economics major, feels no resentment toward Duke Power or the University for withholding information concerning the contamination.

Clemson student, Mahommid Shup stated, "They did what anyone would have done. For instance, if you cheat, you don't tell anyone. Why stir up trouble for yourself?"

Dog burger flipped

OCONEE, S.C. (TP) — An Oconee man was arrested for abusing his pet with a spatula. On Thursday afternoon, Oconee County police responded to a phone call reporting that Tom Smit of Walhalla was chasing his dog around with a spatula yelling, "Come back Boopsy, I didn't mean to hit you over and over on the head with my spatula. I didn't mean it. I really didn't."

Smit was apparently cooking steaks in his backyard when his dog became daring and snagged his dinner. Smit, a track runner in his high school years, quickly chased down his elderly dog and began smacking it over the head, demanding that Boopsy give back his steak.

"We were afraid for the poor dog," said Smit's neighbor, Nora Joe Hanson, who witnessed the whole event.

"I ain't got much else to do but watch my neighbors lives," admitted Hanson.

"Her testimony will be used to put this man away for a long time," warned Hal Greene, attorney for the Animal Rights Association after the first day of deliberations. "With the bruises on Boopsy and his scars, both mental and physical, the court will surely find Smit guilty of unnecessary cruelty to animals."

Smit, still holding his spatula, said, "I deserve anything they give me. I am a lowdown, dirty animal abuser, and I need help to be able to put down this spatula forever."

The court will render a decision within the next three days.

USC cracks

COLUMBIA, S.C. (TP) — Once again, the University of South Carolina has run into trouble with the law concerning their football players. Over 60 grams of cocaine were seized last weekend on the USC campus.

Steve Taneyhill, the starting quarterback for the Gamecocks, has been charged with possession and illegal use of cocaine. Along with Taneyhill, ten unnamed football players were also arrested. Police are still investigating this situation and hope to find who sold them the cocaine.

Taneyhill has already been in trouble with the law this past year. He was charged with illegal possession of alcohol under the age of 21.

This incident adds even more embarrassment to USC, who has suffered through many years of cocaine abuse by its football players.

The first case of cocaine abuse came from George "Cocaine" Rogers, a nickname given to him by his Washington Redskin teammates. It has been said that Rogers used cocaine during his entire tenure in college and that he increased his usage in professional football.

Rogers played for the New Orleans Saints for four years before being kicked out of the NFL. He was reinstated three years later and played for the Washington Redskins for three years only to be kicked out again.

"This has to stop, and it's going to stop now," said a Columbia Police official. "The Columbia Police Department will no longer stand for this. It's time to clean up their act. If they think they can get away with this, they are dead wrong."

Reflection pond unlocks mystery

by Dave Moorman
staff writer

The remains of Jimmy Hoffa, the notorious union leader of the Teamsters who disappeared 20 years ago, was discovered underneath the reflection pool fountain during a recent cleaning on Wednesday afternoon. The find has ended years of searching and speculations as to his whereabouts.

Bob Dance, a member of the University maintenance crew, was pressure-cleaning the bottom of one of the fountains when large pieces of concrete and tar began breaking up to expose something.

Dance continued to break apart the concrete until an unusual hole was uncovered. He called over his supervisor, Jack Schwimmer, for advice on how to proceed.

After receiving permission from Schwimmer to perform repairs, Dance continued to dig and break up the surrounding concrete and tar in order to fill it with fresh concrete. During the process, he dug up what appeared to be part of a human arm bone. Dance immediately informed Schwimmer, who called the authorities.

The police uncovered the remains of a skeleton wearing remnants of a tweed sport coat, white dress shirt, slacks and a tie. The bones were transported to the Greenville County coroner's office, where they ran a dental scan which confirmed the remains to be those of Jimmy Hoffa.

Dance said during the FBI interrogation, "I knew it was him. I could tell by his tacky tie, the dirty bastard."

Lieutenant John Baring was in charge of the original Hoffa investigation in 1975 and was asked Wednesday night to re-open the case. "We still don't know who killed [Hoffa] and brought him here," remarked Baring.

"Now that we have his remains, we will be able to put the final pieces together about his death. The discovery of Jimmy's body could lead to a resolution of this 20 year old case," concluded Baring.

Jimmy Hoffa was the head of the Teamsters in the 1960s and early 1970s. He was known to have Mafia ties in New York City and dirty politicians in his pocket. One of Hoffa's known conflicts was with President John F. Kennedy.

Hoffa disappeared mysteriously in August 1975. Many believe the Mafia killed him and disposed of his body. There were many speculations as to where his body was, including such locations as the New York City Giants' stadium.

Special Agent Bruce Sagat speculates how Hoffa's body got here: "They must have kept him alive until they got down South. If they hadn't, that would have been a hell of a smelly trip in the summer heat with that fat, dead body in the trunk."

Sagat worked with the FBI on the Hoffa disappearance case in 1975. He had found no conclusive evidence until now.

Sagat remarked, "We can now, hopefully, nail the scum that did this."

Relatives of Hoffa are planning to cremate the rest of his remains and sprinkle them from an airplane over Atlantic City. "That's the way he (Hoffa) would have wanted," Jack Hoffa, Jimmy Hoffa's illegitimate son, said reverently.

The hole in the reflection pool will quickly be filled after the investigation of the grave is completed so the fountains can be activated again.

Even when the reflection pool is filled and the fountains are spitting, Clemson will still remember who was lurking underneath its waters for 20 years.

Obituary

Editor reigns briefly

Michael "Mikey" Burns, a Clemson University English major and Lee County native, was struck and killed by lightning Wednesday afternoon in a freak fair-weather frisbee accident that left several student bystanders unharmed. Burns was 21.

"It was just a weird accident," said Campus Police Chief Albeit Homely. "Mikey and some of the other new Tiger staffers were playing with that new aluminum frisbee of theirs out on Bowman Field, when he was struck down."

Burns, recently named Editor-in-Chief of the student newspaper, The Tiger, was cutting his editing for the print media class at the time, according to fellow journalism minor Clator Butler. "It was Boleman-Herring who did this. I'm sure of it," Butler told reporters at the scene. "He'd promised never to cut class again, or else—but it was so dern sunny on Wednesday..."

Time-Out Editor David Baker concurred. "I knew our prof was vengeful, but this is strictly Witches of Eastwick stuff..."

Several other students, who refused to comment on the record, said the aluminum frisbee vaporized during the lightning strike.

Reached for comment today in the University's English department, professor Elizabeth Boleman-Herring, playing idly with a metallic frisbee on her desk, expressed deep sympathy for Burns's family and loved ones. "If only that child had been in class. He had four absences, you know," she said.

Burns is survived by his parents, Scottish dancers Robbie "Bubba" and Gracie Burns, of Lee County; four siblings, First-, Second-, Third- and Fourth-Degree Burns, of the home; and significant other, Ms. T "Tigress" Johnson, of Macon, Georgia.

Services will be held Monday at 2 p.m. at the small, burned-out crater on Bowman Field. In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be made to the Equip Strobe With a Lightning Rod Fund.

The family will receive friends in the Eleanor Holmes ballroom at the Clemson House. They plan to ignite fireworks in Burns' memory.

"Mike loved to shoot fireworks. He would visit Mrs. Firecracker before going to see his grandparents in Georgia," said John Cooper, a close personal friend.

"His grandparents were avid Clemson baseball fans. They liked to celebrate after every Clemson baseball and football win."

Tradition returns at expense of civil rights

Shannon Faulkner has done it again. Her continuing battle to join the corps of cadets at the Citadel has triggered the unforeseen step by the state legislature to return Clemson University to its days as a military college.

As if that's not bad enough, Clemson will be an all-female military college. Male students will be forced to transfer either to the University of South Carolina or the Citadel. Females students, given that they decide to stay, will be issued sharp new gray uniforms to go with their new rules handbook.

What this situation boils down to is civil rights. Does the Constitution guarantee Shannon Faulkner the right to attend a South Carolina military institution? Yes it does.

No matter how much we may want to preserve the all-male tradition of the Citadel, no matter how ridiculous Faulkner may seem to us, no matter how much trouble, time and revenue it will cost the state of South Carolina, she has that right. But not at the expense of the civil rights of every student, male and female, at Clemson University.

Males at Clemson will take far greater offense at having to attend the Citadel or South Carolina than they would at simply being denied the opportunity to return to Clemson by reason of their gender. Why not the Citadel? Lords of Discipline, enough said. USC? The idea of being a Gamecock makes most males at Clemson nauseous.

How can the state legislature justify throwing away decades of tradition in favor of the civil rights of just one wannabe female militant? In order to preserve the Citadel as an all male military institution, the S.C. state legislature has decided to change another of its state-supported schools into an all-female military college.

This is a terrible decision in itself, but if that is the only way to save the Citadel as well as honor Shannon Faulkner's constitutional rights, then why not change USC instead?

Clemson is a much more worthwhile institution, as any intelligent person in South Carolina will tell you. Besides, those city folk in Columbia could use a refreshing change of pace. Out here in the country, things are doing just fine.

What is the simple solution? Shave Shannon Faulkner's head and give her that rifle to march with all over Charleston. After all, if she wants the rights of a Citadel military man, then that is exactly what we South Carolinians should give her, not a whole new school. Clemson should not be told to change.

Our Position:

Legislature is wrong to dictate change to female military college.

Ticket witch speaks out

To the editor:

I have worked with Parking and Traffic Control for the past ten years, and in that time I feel I have necessarily grown a pretty thick skin. We in the parking office are used to complaints and try not to take them personally. Considering how many we hear everyday, I'm surprised anyone in my office even listens to them any more.

Even so, I feel a commentary written by The Tiger's former Sports Editor Michael Burns in the Feb. 14 issue of the paper went too far. It only expressed his opinion, not both sides of the story.

First of all, ever since the ex-Editor-in-Chief Terrell Johnson had her car towed earlier this year, The Tiger has carried on a witch hunt, or a ticket-witch hunt, against parking enforcement.

Then, Michael Burns has to get in on the act by insulting our intelligence, saying that a high school diploma is enough to make us overqualified for our jobs. I can attest to the fact that I have used my high school education more than once in the line of duty, and it's about time somebody recognized that.

Have they no shame?

The picture of the officer in her car that was run with Burns' editorial instead of a cartoon was completely misleading. Frankly, I would have preferred a sarcastic caricature. I mean, that parking enforcement officer in the picture could have been simply shielding her eyes from the sun. She did not have to be hiding her face from the camera in shame.

We work hard to do our jobs well, beating that pavement everyday. It is not an easy job. Students yell at you, faculty threaten you, and administrators constantly try to bribe you. I am always struggling to keep a smile on my face and to remain polite.

All I can say to you people at The Tiger is that you can't know what my job is like until you have driven a mile in my cart. Until then, butt out. We have enough to contend with.

Sincerely,

Brother Jim strikes back

To the editor:

The entire student body of Clemson University is going to Hell. I have seen students downtown partaking in sinful activities. I have heard their blasphemous words and seen their wicked deeds.

All of this does not hold a candle to what I have just learned. It's bad enough that there is a bar on campus, but when it becomes a den of sexual perversion and pleasures of the flesh, I feel that I must put my foot down. To have this Edgar's place displaying the naked bodies of lost lambs, I can only shed a tear and hope that it isn't true. But it is, and I cannot and will not stand by and allow this pathetic exploitation of otherwise innocent men for the enjoyment of sex-crazed, demonic women to take place.

My followers and I will picket the establishment from opening to closing. We will harass and try to stop anyone who tries to enter. Those who break through we will beat with our Bibles until the Word of God enters their souls and they are saved.

If this letter is not enough to stop this disgusting plan, I will once again visit campus, spreading the Word of God until the godless heathens of this institution listen.

The end is near.

Brother Jim

Parking praised

To the editor:

I just want to comment on the wide availability of parking on campus. I am a junior who lives on campus, and I choose to park my car in the R-3 parking lot. Notice that I call it a parking lot instead of a "pit." A pit is the part of the body under one's arm, not an area on campus used for parking. If anything, the parking lots should be called peach pits because of their astounding cleanliness, easy access, and safety.

Tiger party cut short

It's about time this worthless newspaper was closed down. Week after week we have put out a substandard tabloid filled with poor writing and unskilled reporting. Indeed, it is incredible to believe that this paper has been allowed to continue even to this point.

When one considers the wide base of student support and the fat wad of cash provided by CU

editorial editor

budget surpluses, one would conclude that The Tiger would be a professional, well-organized, informative and objective news source.

But, this is not the case. Issue after issue has confirmed my suspicions: this newspaper is no longer worth the small amounts of time or the patience it demands.

Our full-time, overpaid staff composed of professional journalists should be ashamed of the shoddy work we do.

Our incompetence and overall lack of intelligence has only contributed to the further demise of Clemson University, a slide from historical prominence to present-day apathy.

The University will be much better off in the future without The Tiger. Students will feel much more secure being sheltered from the knowledge of administrative decisions.

The Clemson police department will run much more effectively without a news source to interfere in their always-benevolent actions.

Local merchants will not be forced to waste valuable advertising funds in a newspaper no one reads. These changes caused by the closing of The Tiger are just a few of the reasons why this shutdown is long overdue.

Above all else, the part-time writers, who do most of the work for us professionals, will stop wasting their time in this misadventure we call a newspaper.

They will be able to concentrate more fully on their studies and not be distracted by the unworthy extracurricular activities that The Tiger subjects.

Personally, I look forward to filling my time with the host of other opportunities the metropolis of Clemson offers its student population. Damn, I'm still not 21.

WWC president justifies military school

To the editor:

There has been a lot of talk recently about changing Clemson back into a military school, but this time strictly for women. This is the best, most constructive idea that the Clemson administration has come up with in a long time. Practically all of my female friends feel the same way, and we are quite justified.

First of all, plenty of all-male schools, and more specifically military schools, already exist. When the government decided to allow us to serve our country, they established a few co-ed schools. By all means, we are grateful for that, but we still have a lot of catching up to do.

Restructuring Clemson as an all-girls school would be amazing. We are just as patriotic and capable as our male counterparts, and we have an added determination as well.

Also, having a reputable institution would help to bypass many embarrassing situations, such as the lawsuit between Shannon Faulkner and the Citadel.

Second, why do men always get to have big guns? WWC (Women and Weapons at Clemson) is tired of the stereotypes. We want women to step forward and take hold of these powerful resources. It takes skill and dedication to master a firearm, and not enough of our kind can boast of being sharpshooters.

Top few females have experienced the adrenaline rush and feeling of pure power that comes from just firing at a target. If they could only imagine what it's like to fire at an enemy!! Turning Clemson into a women's military academy would help our cause.

Third, as with all military schools, much emphasis is put on academic discipline. Too many women at Clemson fall into the category of silly sorority girl. That's just not acceptable anymore.

The females of the world must take advantage of the educational opportunities that such a facility would offer. Learning to think strategically while pursuing individual academic goals is exactly what our population needs. This campus is ripe and ready for this sort of change.

It's time for the ladies of South Carolina to push this platform. Each of us should be all that we can be, and transforming Clemson into a women's military college is plausible, probable and profitable. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Pat Patterson
President of WWC

Parking receives gold stars

I was relieved to find that the parking spaces at the top of the quad had changed. Instead of having only four 30 minute spaces and three service vehicle spots, the parking officials decided to take away one of the 30 minute and make it another service vehicle space. In addition, two of the three remaining spaces were changed to 15 minute spaces.

I can't begin to tell you of my joy. No longer will I have to wait 30 minutes to get a parking spot. My time will be conserved because I now have only to wait 15 minutes.

My accolades go to the CUPD for giving out so many tickets. Their interest in the safety of the students at Clemson shows through this generous punishment. We are all college students and we should be mature enough to abide by the laws set for us.

The $20 tickets should be raised. I do not feel that this fine is enough punishment. Take the University of South Carolina for example. Their parking tickets are a mere $2. Do you think this hurts their wallets at all? They also don't get towed after three tickets. The Gamecocks are learning no responsibility.

I hope this letter is read by all. I think we should all take it upon ourselves to quit crying about parking and learn a lesson of responsibility. I'm sure that the money they make off our parking fines goes to such good uses as the planning of a parking garage to be built between Fike and the quad.

Sincerely,
Rex Bickley

REGISTRATION BEGINS IN APRIL 1995

INTRODUCTION

Beginning on April 10, 1995 students can register for the 1995 Maymester, summer, and fall terms at computer terminals, personal computers with a modem, and touchtone telephones. The system gives an immediate response as to whether or not a seat in a requested class has been reserved. Students can use the on-line system to make schedule changes as often as they like until registration ends May 10 for Maymester and first summer session, June 22 for second summer session, and August 9 for fall semester. Late registration occurs just before classes begin, but the on-line system must be used for all course enrollments. The course drop/add section is deleted from the registration form, and drop/add slips will not be issued in the Student Records Office. Registration forms are prepared only for students needing to pay fees and clear restricting messages. Students enrolled in off-campus courses can call Records and Registration at 656-5283 or 656-2305, 8:00 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday and the Computer Help Desk at 656-3494, 4:30-10:00 p.m., Monday-Thursday for assistance with their password. Undergraduates are limited to 19 credits until late registration when the limit increases to 21. Undergraduates with GPR less than 2.0 are limited to 15 credits. Graduates are limited to 13 credits.

ACCESS

Entrance to on-line registration is based on the student's classification and is controlled by specific windows of access. Students cannot register earlier than their access window date and time. However, once their window opens, they have access until August 9. Classification is established for all students as of March 10, 1995 and it is based on the number of credits earned plus enrolled credits in the 1995 spring semester. Classification for new transfer students is based on transfer credits posted to the academic record as of March 10, 1995 plus enrolled credits in the 1995 spring semester. Students can use Student Information Services to view their academic records and verify their classification. Freshmen have a total of 0-29 credits, sophomores 30-59, juniors 60-94, and seniors 95 and above.

Classification

Graduates and Disabled .....	Monday, April 10
Seniors, Honors, Co-op and Athletes .....	Tuesday and Wednesday, April 11, 12

Sophomores .....	Monday and Tuesday, April 17, 18
Freshmen .....	Wednesday and Thursday, April 19, 20

Opening Access Date

PHASE-IN OF INITIAL ACCESS

When an access window first opens, student numbers (social security numbers) will be phased in at one hour intervals. The phase-in is keyed to the last digit of the student number. The timetable is shown below.

TIMETABLE FOR INITIAL ACCESS TO ON-LINE REGISTRATION

* Classification is established for all students as of March 10, 1995 and it is determined by credit hours earned plus current enrolled hours.

** Friday was not used because most computer labs are not accessible after 6:00 p.m.

ADVISING

Advising procedures vary among academic departments. Watch for special instructions about advising. General University guidelines indicate advising for registration should occur April 5-19.

MATERIALS

Individual degree progress reports, registration schedule cards and instruction sheets will be in the student's major department by March 31. The 1995 Summer/Fall Schedule of Classes will be available at the Student Union by April 5. Retain schedule book for use with telephone registration. A worksheet and course codes are in the book and must be used when registering by touchtone telephone. Students' degree progress reports can be viewed year-round at computer terminals via Student Information Services (SIS), and the course offering can be viewed via SIS beginning March 10. The student instruction sheet shows the location of terminals and the hours they are available for registration.

CHANGING MAJORS

Students planning to change majors should do so by March 8. Change-of-Major forms are available in the Student Records Office, 104 Sikes Hall. If the form is turned in after March 8, ask for special instructions in Student Records.

ON-LINE REGISTRATION STEPS

STEP 1

Schedule a visit with an advisor as early as possible. Record course requests on the two-part registration card. Have advisor sign the department copy and retain it. Keep the student copy for use when entering course requests. The advising number printed on the registration schedule card is needed by undergraduates when registering on-line. Graduate students do not need an advising number.

STEP 2

Know your student number (SSN) and computer password. If you need assistance, go to the Help Desk in the Poole Agricultural Center with a picture ID. Students enrolled in off-campus courses can call Records and Registration at 656-5283 or 656-2305, 8:00 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday and the Computer Help Desk at 656-3494, 4:30 p.m.-10:00 p.m. Monday-Thursday for assistance with their password.

STEP 3

After your access window opens, go to a terminal connected to the mainframe computer. A partial list of locations where terminals are available is on the student instruction sheet available from your major department. Select Student Information Services (SIS) from the initial menu screen. Then select the On-Line Registration system and follow instructions. Students with personal computers and modems may access the system by dialing 656-1700. Call the Help Desk at 656-3494 for assistance with dial-up access. Follow the step-by-step worksheet in the schedule book when using touchtone telephones.

Tunnel trekking

by Joe Milam and Terry Cordaro
interim news editor and staff writer

A recent excavation of the underground tunnels revealed evidence that a main Clemson channel leads to a network of tunnels which cross the Atlantic.

The central tunnel under the University links up with a telecommunications tunnel from the Liberty AT&T building in Columbia and leads directly to Charleston.

In Charleston, the tunnels are combined together from all directions. At the center, there is a 100 foot drop to another tunnel that heads further east.

The tunnels were originally built to house sensitive electrical and telecommunication devices, but some have found another use, international travel.

In a recent book, Frank Upchurch, Travel For Free: Cruise the Tunnel Under The Sea, tells the story of how he travelled throughout Europe and America via the underground.

"I began investigating the tunnels under Clemson as an undergrad," said Upchurch.

"I was bored with my industrial engineering major. The tunnels provided months of investigation and turned out to be very profitable."

During a walk under the streets of New York City in 1991, Upchurch says he discovered 50 pounds of marijuana and over $200,000 in government-issued bearer bonds stashed behind a power generator.

Upchurch later discovered the power generator to be under a mafia owned restaurant.

"I got the hell out of there, but couldn't tell anyone about the find," he said. "So I wrote my book with the money and smoked myself into a frenzy."

In his book, Upchurch has included a complete map of the tunnels that stretch across the world and detailed information concerning the items necessary for a transatlantic journey.

Upchurch stressed, "You can't just jump down that manhole and know where to go. A tunnel traveler must be in top physical and mental condition to undertake the four week trip. Free traveling does not constitute luxury and complimentary peanuts."

by Derrick Jordan
staff writer

University police officers caught the newest Clemson mascot red-pawed, orange-faced and with his pants down with a Tiger Lily Wednesday afternoon in the abandoned wrestling locker room after receiving an anonymous tip.

"We received a call around 4:10 p.m. from an unidentified student that happened to be passing by the locked locker room to hear a lot of screaming and growling coming from within," said Public Safety Director John McKenzie. "We immediately dispatched a police unit to investigate for fear of a rape taking place, but we found the contrary."

Officer Harry Henkel was first to respond. He reported that after the burst through the door, the two intruders did not stop fornicating. He demanded that the man in the tiger suit get off the lady. The man, later found to be Jack Tripper, responded with, "F*** off, we're busy."

Henkel then took out his police bat and began beating the man on the back. The Tiger Lily, Halle Peha, seemed to respond positively to all the activity.

Pena was charged with resisting arrest after managing to cuff herself to three officers and a shower head before tear-gas was used to break up the scene.

"We didn't want to do it, but neither one of them would come quietly," said McKenzie.

When asked what she thought about her arrest, Pena stated, "It was so exciting, but I'm worried that my parents might find out. You aren't recording this are you?"

Jack Tripper is in the Greenville Memorial Hospital recovering from injuries received during the beating.

Once he is removed from critical condition he will be held without bond by the Clemson University Police Department.

It was later announced that the Tiger Cub mascot will have his scholarship taken away, and he will have to spend six months at USC. "I knew I should've firebombed somebody," Tripper said on the stretcher. "Then you idiots would've only given me probation."

More bad news for the Tiger family: the original Tiger mascot has been placed on America's Top Ten Dead-Beat-Dad's list for the third time this decade. Although he refused to comment, we can say that he seems resolute about not paying anything to his family.

Alcohol sales approved

by Joe Milam
interim news editor

During a Clemson City Council meeting on Wednesday, Mar. 29, local church groups met with members of Students For Drunk Sundays (SFDS) and several area bar owners to discuss the issue of Sunday alcohol sales. SFDS is newly formed student group who have been lobbying for the approval of Sunday alcohol sales.

Clemson church members have vehemently opposed the sale of beer during Panther games this upcoming fall. Area churches feel that Sunday morning services would be overshadowed by Panther football and beer.

Kathy Beacham, spokesperson for area churches, said that Sunday morning worshipping will be all but extinguished if Sunday alcohol sales are permitted.

"Students who have been partying all night Saturday and early Sunday morning would be too hung over to attend church."

Mikle Silvertooth, president of SFDS believes alcohol sales on Sunday would be beneficial to the Clemson community. Silvertooth said that a recent survey revealed that alcohol consumption is on the rise on the nation's public colleges and universities.

"More college students drinking translates into an enormous infusion of money into the Clemson Community," stated Silvertooth.

Silvertooth argued that Sunday sales would give students more opportunities to drink on the weekend which in turn would lead to more students purchasing other goods and services.

- REID RUCKER
STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT

"It's common knowledge that alcohol dishibits the mind," explained Silvertooth.

"Students under the influence of alcohol are more likely to make spontaneous purchases of T-shirts and fried chicken. That's the key. T-shirts and chicken."

Silvertooth's insightful and thought provoking argument was convincing. After the meeting, church group decided to stop their opposition to Sunday sales.

Dr. Don Daniel, a Baptist preacher, responded, "I think it would be immoral to oppose anything that is going to create jobs and infuse more money into our community."

City of Clemson police, who are having difficulties funding a proposed new $750,000 police station, are excited about the decision.

"The increased revenue from alcohol sales would be more than enough to cover the cost of the jail," said a police spokesperson.

"Alcohol sales mean more arrests and more arrests translate into more revenue from fines."

"It's a win-win situation for everybody," said Reid Rucker, student body president.

"Students get to drink without worrying about police conducting sting operations to finance their new jail."

She admitted, "I think the lawsuit is just smoke and mirrors to hide the actual motivation of disgruntled administrators who have been unhappy about the hard nose reporting of the former news editor."

According to Johnson, Tyrone Walker is the former news editor in question.

"Tyrone made a lot of administrators cringe when he appeared in their offices and shoved a tape recorder in their faces," said Johnson as she wiped the tears from her cheek. "People forget he was just doing his job."

University officials would not comment on the lawsuit, but they did admit that Mr. Walker was trouble.

"It would be safe to say that Tyrone Walker was a

Administrators are not the only ones astounded by The Tiger's demise. A new student magazine, desperate for a home to call its own, will be moving into the vacated office space in room 906 of the student union.

Rubble to house students

Dorm to be reconstructed from remains

According to McKenzie, students who signed up for either Holmes or McCabe for the fall will be reassigned to the new Johnstone buildings.

A resident of Holmes, Rachel McCrum, stated, "I can't believe this. I've seen the other Johnstone buildings, and there's no way in hell I'm going to live there. I'd transfer to another school before living in Johnstone."

Jen Ferraro, a resident in McCabe, was equally dismayed: "What in God's name prompted them to want to tear down these halls?"

Area construction companies are making bids for the destruction of Holmes and McCabe and construction the new Johnstone buildings.

One possible contractor, Jack Stromp, owner of Stromp Construction said, "I can't believe they have decided to destroy the new buildings and reconstruct facilities of lesser quality."

"They want to rebuild the Johnstone from the remains of the newer buildings? What in the world are they thinking?"

McKenzie ended the interview saying, "If you think about it, this decision is going to make the campus more beautiful. With the old Johnstone buildings reconstructed, the line from the Student Union to Johnstone D would be complete and consistent. It is architecturally seamless and aesthetically pleasing."

Holmes and McCabe will be demolished the day after finals in order to allow enough time to rebuild the Johnstone buildings for the fall.

Big Boy slain

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) - They know who killed Big Boy.

Eight men - most of them college students - admitted to police Tuesday that they stole the 300-pound fiberglass restaurant pitchman Mar. 17, dismembered him with a hacksaw, and scattered his remains around town with notes that declared: "Big Boy is Dead."

Why?

"We were bored," said Tom Martinez, one of 10 suspects who will be charged with misdemeanor counts of criminal mischief. Two other suspects - both juveniles - promised police they would surrender Tuesday but never showed up at police headquarters. The maximum sentence for criminal mischief is 60 days in jail. They could be made to pay restitution for the $3,300 statue, police said.

Dave Nelson, manager of the Big Boy restaurant from which the 6-foot statue was purloined, rejoiced at the news.

"The long saga is over," he said. "We know who killed Big Boy. We can all rest a little bit easier."

His one fear:

"I hope it doesn't inspire other Big Boy killers. I don't think we can handle another one."

Police Detective Ron Scanlon said the pranksters admitted they were the "Pimps of Pimpyness" who signed the grisly notes found taped to Big Boy's remains.

schedules

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - A gag to spark interest in the noncredit class schedule at Metropolitan Community College has turned into an expensive boo-boo.

The college spent $19,578 to reprint about 250,000 schedules after officials discovered Road Kill Cuisine, Pig Latin and Nerd Dancing among listed courses.

The first course, the schedule said, will teach the student how to prepare dishes from "poodle with noodles to the short stack of flat cats and the Great Dane danish...." The class "gives a whole new meaning to the term 'animal lovers!'"

The dance course is "designed for the hardcore nerd ... Computer geeks welcome!" And the Pig Latin class is touted as "the latest technique from the West Coast to avoid effective communication skills."

The gag listings were discovered before they were mailed to about 243,000 homes, but some 7,000 copies were distributed to Metro's campuses and some off-campus locations.

Brassiere vandals

LAKEWOOD, Colo. (AP) - A retired trash collector was arrested after stores in the Denver metropolitan area discovered scores of bras had been slashed.

Milton Anderson, 63, was arrested on suspicion of criminal mischief and released on $500 bond.

The vandal damaged bras of all sizes, shapes and brands, always slashing only the right cup.

Within hours of Anderson's arrest, however, women's slips, underpants and bras were discovered slashed at a Denver Kmart store.

Investigators suspect a man who was arrested for stealing a book from the store.

Several other area Kmart stores have been hit, including another store in where 365 bras were reported slashed in less than two weeks.

to charge $7,000 in personal purchases, including items he bought at Victoria's Secret lingerie boutique.

Hallam stopped using the card at the beginning of February and has paid the bills.

Hallam, 50, has worked for the state since July 1982 and makes $21,768 a year in his state job. Bradford said Hallam inherited some money a couple of years ago but did not say how much.

Under state policy, state employees who have state credit cards pay the bills, then are reimbursed by the state. They are reimbursed only for expenses related to their jobs.

Bradford said the cards are not intended for personal use.

of natural causes, police said.

Three ways to beat the high cost of college.

1. The Montgomery GI Bill
2. Student loan repayment
3. Part-time income

The Army Reserve Alternate Training Program is a smart way to pay for college.

First, if you qualify, the Montgomery GI Bill can provide you with up to $6,840 for current college expenses or approved vo/tech training.

Second, if you have or obtain a qualified student loan not in default, you may get it paid off at the rate of 15% per year or $500, whichever is greater, up to a maximum of $10,000. Selected military skills can double that maximum.

Third, you can earn part-time money in college, and here's how it works: One summer you take Basic Training, and the next summer you receive skill training at an Army school. You'll earn over $1,500 for Basic and even more for skill training. Then you'll attend monthly meetings at an Army Reserve unit near your college, usually one weekend a month plus two weeks a year. You'll be paid over $105 a weekend to start. It's worth thinking about. Give us a call:

'Face to Face,' hand in hand

Joel, John to tie the knot at Death Valley concert on April 9

by Levi Nayman
staff writer

The already eagerly awaited Elton John/Billy Joel "Face to Face" concert received a huge boost of publicity when it was announced that the two main participants will wed after the encore of the April 9 concert in Death Valley.

Michael Cohl, president of Cellar Door concerts, which is promoting the show, confirmed reports of the impending marriage during an L.A. press conference on March 25 after a release party for John's new CD, Made in England.

Says Cohl, "Elton and Billy wanted to make their own statement, rather than leaving it to the tabloids."

In an official press release, Joel spoke of the circumstances surrounding this surprise announcement.

"Over the course of our year-long tour, Elton and I have grown increasingly fond of each other, on an artistic and, yes, a romantic level. Let me assure our fans that this is no publicity stunt; we are truly in love. Elton helped ease the pain I suffered following my divorce."

Billy Joel hastened to add the following puzzling words to his press release:

"I want everyone to understand something. I realize that this whole thing may cast doubts upon my manhood. I beg the public to please keep an open mind. Just because I'm marrying Elton doesn't mean that I'm gay, not that there is anything wrong with that!"

John's agent also issued a release, which reports that the wedding will occur during or after the encore of the duo's April 9 concert at Death Valley. Reverend Al Sharpton will preside over the proceedings.

This union is sure to join the tabloid ranks of other celebrity

Edgar's to hire exotic dancers

by Meraj K. Anas
staff writer

Due to the announcement that Clemson University is becoming an all-female military college, several of the area clubs are changing their approach.

One of the most notable changes is the transformation of Edgar's, the campus bar located in the University Union, from a popular hangout for both males and females to a male nudy-bar. Sources close to The Tiger have released information claiming that the bar, presently a place for area bands to play, will soon feature exotic male dancers.

Acting President Phil Prince said, "It is in the best interest of the university to change to an all-female college. Therefore, our facilities must adapt to account for the change. If that means that a male nudy-bar is going to open to help in this transition stage, so be it."

"I've always been in favor of what is good for the students. Perhaps our students will be more culturally enriched."

In opposition to the various decisions made by the University, 67 percent of the alumni have banded to petition the opening of the male nudy-bar at Edgar's, which will soon be called the Blazing Stallion. Of the males who voted, 94 percent were against the formation of a male nudy-bar. Interestingly enough, 88 percent of the females who voted were in favor of the change.

Meanwhile, sources have revealed that the Blazing Stallion is hiring exotic dancers. The club is already lining up performances for the weekends. In fact, it is rumored

Porn movies shown

by Yakko Warner
staff writer

The Y-Theater has announced a surprising marketing tie-in with Edgar's nightclub. To commemorate the new focus of Edgar's, the Y-Theater's lineup this weekend will cover an unprecedented theme.

Instead of the previously scheduled Quentin Tarantino film festival, Y operators will show a series of male-exploitation and women's porno movies. "We wanted to help promote the new girls' night out approach Edgar's is taking, while hopefully increasing our own business a bit," said new Y-Theater general manager Andrea Murray.

"We're hoping to convince women that an evening of watching male-bashing movies at the Y, followed by oogling at men as they dance and demean themselves down at Edgar's, is an excellent choice for weekend entertainment."

Additionally, some of the hunky new dancers at Edgar's will serve a double-duty working in the lobby of the Y-Theater this weekend.

Ladies who keep their Y-Theater ticket stub will get drinks for half price if they head to Edgar's after the movie.

Although the Y-Theater's fare will go back to more mainstream films next week, some changes in the booking procedures can be expected.

"There will be no more macho action movies, nor any silly romantic comedies. In short, if men like it, or if it makes women feel good about men, it won't be on the screen here as long as I'm in charge," reported Murray. "The only action film we might show would be La Femme Nikita, and only because it's about an independent-minded woman who kills a bunch of men."

When asked if the planned changes might drive away many of the Y-Theater's male customers, Murray said: "Yeah, it probably will. But if some guy thinks he can get his date into bed by bringing her here and spending less than four bucks, I for one don't want his money polluting the cash drawer here anyway. They can go someplace else to see their movies for all I care."

Managers of other local theaters seem to support Murray on her last point, saying that they welcome business from all sorts of people, even financially-strapped, hormonally-crazed young men.

Gathering changes name again

by Christopher Nixon
staff writer

Owners of The Gathering have announced that the club has been sold to a New York businessman, Brian Norton, who owns many clubs in the Rochester area, including Heaven.

When asked why the present management decided to sell, spokeswoman Nicole Englert answered, "Well, we've been in business for almost two years. We've been lucky so far, but we just want to get out before someone gets shot in the parking lot again."

Englert was referring to an incident two years ago, in which a shooting occurred when The Gathering was named The Underground.

When asked why he wanted to buy the establishment, Norton replied, "New York is too darn cold."

Norton will still be running his New York clubs, but the headquarters of his business will be in Clemson. "I see Clemson as a city on the go, and I want to be a part of it," Norton said.

The new name of The Gathering is still being decided, but there are two frontrunners: "Dancing Daze and Brian's Place."

file photo

The Gathering, formerly The Underground, will change ownership again in the fall. Bands such as Cinderella will be featured weekly.

According to Norton, there will be a live band playing there one night a week, usually a well-known band past their prime, much in the same vein as Characters or Cowboys Nitelife. The rest of the week will be Top 40 dance, house, techno and rave music.

The club will still be open to those 18 and older, but the prices are going to be higher. A year's membership will now be $50 for those 21 and over, $75 for 18-21 year-olds.

When asked why the prices would be so high, Norton said, "When we are bringing in big-name bands like Cinderella and Warrant, you are going to pay big money to see them."

"Don't worry, though, the club will be open to non-members, although cover charges haven't been set yet."

The new management will be taking over in August, just in time for the new school year.

Chemistry class discovers new plant

by Levi Nayman
staff writer

Students in the Clemson University chemistry department, in cooperation with the Botanical Gardens, have come up with a new substitute for beer and liquor. After two years of testing and research, the new product has exhibited outstanding promise, drawing praise from the scientific and academic communities. It is said to produce feelings of euphoria and happiness. And best of all, the newly discovered plant is completely legal!

The plant, christened "marijuana" by chemistry department head Dr. Joe Kolis, is a cross breed of several of the plants and flowers that grow in Clemson's botanical garden. It is green and leafy, and carries a strong aroma. The buds of the plant can be smoked in cigarette form or through pipes.

Several cross breeds were introduced to a focus group of chemistry students. The group has spent the better part of the school year holed up in a sealed barn, smoking the various mutated plants. The group's reaction to various activities were analyzed. Among the activities they were exposed to were eating, watching cartoons, and listening to music.

Dr. Kolis said, "When the focus group listened to the same Jimi Hendrix CD four times in a row, following it each time with a philosophical discussion about the lyrics and backwards guitar solos, I knew we were on to something. We isolated the DNA strand and progressed further with our research."

Kolis reports that as research continued, bursts of laughter, sometimes lasting for minutes, was a common reaction to many of the activities.

Following an exhibition and presentation of marijuana use by students of Melzna's chemistry 102 class, a river of endorsements and praise was unleashed at a press conference in Tillman Auditorium. New Clemson University President Deno' Curris called the discovery of marijuana "a milestone achievement for Clemson University."

Curtis went on to say, "This is representative of the type of ingenuity and forward thinking that will soon place Clemson among the elite American universities."

Clemson Police Chief Johnson Link said, "It should help reduce the amount of alcohol-related crime on campus."

The praise is not just limited to the chemistry department, however. Dr. Thomas M. Keinath, dean of the college of engineering, said of many of his students who also attend chemistry classes, "This whole thing has really expanded my students' imaginations and enthusiasm. In our ceramic engineering classes, students show up early and stay late building ceramic statues which can be filled with water and used to smoke marijuana. Also, enrollment in agricultural engineering classes has almost doubled!"

Dr. Kolis reports a few mild side effects, including reddening of the eyes and increased appetite. He added that, as with anything of this nature, people should not drive under the influence.

"This is a very good thing, but it is foolhardy to treat [marijuana] any differently than alcohol on the road," said Dr. Kolis.

Pending FDA approval, marijuana will be available at the Clemson agricultural center as well as Cats. The price is expected to be comparable with premium beer.

Players offers family fun

by L. Clator Butler, Jr.
staff writer

Over in Oconee County, on U.S. 123 between Clemson and Seneca, is a little-known establishment that boasts fun for the whole family.

Players, one of the newest entertainment establishments in the area, brings good, wholesome, grade-A fun to an otherwise dull area.

There is something for everyone at this playland—fun for adults and kids alike, and nobody will go away unsatisfied. Every patron is treated to a special menu and a warm hand.

As advertisements tell, Players is a gentlemen's club, which alludes to the high-caliber entertainment offered.

This establishment, a haven for those who seek culture and refinement, titillates each patron with a friendly wait staff, live entertainment and a sense of belonging.

Players' wait staff is definitely the friendliest in the area. The waitresses know every trick in the book and virtually bend over backwards to see that the customer is satisfied. They make it a goal to see that every experience at the table is extraordinary. Servthe most emotional dancing from skilled dancers whose moves will make the audience rise and fall in their seats as they do on stage. Each entertainer brings her own special talents and settings to each performance, creating an experience for the audience that is no less than exotic.

The audience is as much a part of the show as anybody as Players' approach to entertainment bases itself on the conceptual "Theatre in the Round." Not only can one appreciate the fine entertainment on stage, but also he can be included in the show right at the table... yet another way the management and staff at Players wish to say "Thank you" and "Y'all come back."

Players has already achieved and surpassed its potential. Now destined for bigger and harder challenges, it will offer the highest in entertainment and family values in the coming years.

Naked Edgar's

that Chippendales are scheduled for the club late this summer. Normal admission will be five dollars for females.

Sorry guys, the only way males will be allowed to enter the club is if they are naked. If you are interested in becoming an exotic dancer, call 555-STUD and ask for Butch.

Coffee house competition heats up

by Brian Davis
staff writer

Of course, any Clemson-area coffee connoisseur knows about the controversy surrounding the two downtown coffee houses. Recently, the intensity of their competition has reached new heights.

According to Mocha (not her real name), a graduate student employee of The Coffee House, the controversy all began when Joe and Tammy Tur, the current owners of Caffe Espresso, scoped out business at The Coffee House prior to opening their business.

According to Mocha, they were "very friendly" and The Coffee House employees were duped into being very open and honest about the nature of their business—prompting the visitors to open their own shop.

The location of the new coffee house, right across the street, encourages intense speculation.

The situation actually has become more interesting as the conflict has been prolonged. The actual order of events has been skewed and confused by participants due to the recent flurry of drastic events.

Caffe Espresso opened, and in doing so, included a smoking section. Naturally, this was appealing to all of the area smokers. The Coffee House renovated and started displaying local art work. Caffe Espresso displayed pieces of Columbian modern art. The Coffee House then started regular poetry readings. Caffe Espresso introduced local live bands on weekends.

And, as always, the Coffee House beat Caffe Espresso in price by offering three free refills on regular house coffees. Of course, Caffe Espresso is open on Sundays, too.

Response to this last development was quite unexpected, to say the least.

According to witnesses, one of The Coffee House employees actually performed a countertop dance as a type of lively entertainment in an attempt to attract more customers.

One source who wished to be unnamed said, "I was just sipping a cup of mocha and all of a sudden this half-naked woman started dancing exotic dances all over my table."

"She knocked over my cup, but I didn't really mind. I was having fun."

The fireworks really began when Caffe Espresso appeared to be offering a truce. The owners apparently sent over a tray of piping hot coffee along with a note that read, "Have some of the real stuff and sober up!"

Before long, a Caffe Espresso employee mysteriously vanished while working.

Fantasia (also not his real name), a Caffe Espresso employee and a Clemson University student, reported, "He had just stepped out to take out the trash—it was after dark. We gave him 30 minutes, but he never came back. It's too bad because he was a really hard worker and an all-around nice guy."

Not surprisingly, the police investigation into the incident over spring break turned up nothing, although The Coffee House is very suspicious.

"Perhaps, if we sold more glazed doughnuts, [the abducted employee's] disappearance would not have been taken so lightly," said Lynn Francois, manager of Caffe Espresso.

"I'm just ready to get this whole thing cleared up."

It seems the conflict may soon be settled, once and for all. The owners have taken matters into their own hands and challenged each other to a final showdown.

The two coffee houses are giving the public of Clemson a chance to decide.

Today, starting at noon, all customers presenting a ballot including their own name, favorite coffee house, and reason for their choice will receive a complimentary cup of coffee.

The exact settlement has not been disclosed, but it is rumored that the most popular coffee house will get its kidnapped employee back.

Wedding planned

marriages such as Michael Jackson and Lisa Marie Presley, Tom Arnold and Roseanne, and Mike Tyson and Robin Givens. On a financial level, this makes John and Joel one of the richest of celebrity couples, second only to Jackson and Presley.

Although John's homosexuality has been common knowledge for some time, the announcement came as a shock to many Billy Joel fans.

Rolling Stone publisher Jann Wenner, a long time fan and friend of both musicians, believes that this is just an evolution of their previous relationship. "Joel and John have long loved each other's songs, often performing each other's music during this tour."

"It seems natural to me that these two immense talents would want to tie the knot. I can't wait to hear what musical collaborations they can come up with." Indeed, an album of duets is believed to be forthcoming.

Some music insiders, however, are skeptical. "This is a complete crock! It is the biggest fraud ever in the history of showbiz marriages!" exclaimed the president of a prominent record company, who wished to remain anonymous.

"Quite a coincidence that there is a full scale tour going on and Elton has a new record out," the president commented.

Another insider claimed to have seen Joel with other women as recently as three weeks ago at an industry bash:

"Joel was drunk out of his mind and was fooling around with an exquisite trio of blondes. He sure didn't look like a man who was ready to spend the rest of his life with Elton. I don't buy it."

The source also stated that even if it is true, "the marriage won't last. They are just too different. All they have in common is music."

The shocking announcement did have an immediate financial effect. John's new record, Made in England, debuted at number one on the Billboard charts this week, and all of the remaining tickets for the tour sold out within an hour of the press release.

Tickets for the show at Clemson are said to be going for up to $1500 each from scalpers.

Other details of the on-stage wedding are forthcoming. The pair will take a brief respite from touring after the Clemson show to honeymoon at an undisclosed location.

Kris Kross
Totally Krossed Out
RUFFHOUSE/COLUMBIA

by Levi Nayman
staff critic

Hot spot: "I Missed the Bus"
Low blow: When the CD ends

Bottom line: Generation-defining masterpiece

The still-fruitful Seattle grunge scene has produced yet another hot act—Kris Kross, a rock/fusion/funk duo that has been tearing up the club scene for the better part of two years.

After a fierce battle of the record companies for their services, Ruffhouse landed the act with a lucrative contract and signing bonus. With several videos on MTV rotation, a heavy buzz is building around this band. Their debut album, Totally Krossed Out, proves that they are deserving of all the hype.

The songwriting team of Kris and Kris provides a fresh, almost punk-like perspective to their music and lyrics. They seem poised to pick up the Generation X spokesman mantle sadly abdicated almost a year ago by the late Kurt Cobain.

On the opening track, "Jump," Kris pines for his lost innocence. "Mack dad will make you jump," notes Kris wryly as Kris intones a remorseful "Word!" in the background. It's as if by invoking outdated slang, Kris and Kris are mourning their lost childhood.

But just as the duo seem to be exposing their vulnerability, they warn the song's antagonist, an unnamed authority figure, that Kris Kross has no intentions of gracefully joining the establishment. "You know you should know betta!" exclaims a triumphant and defiant Kris. It is a stunning track that haunts the listener, revealing more with each play.

But "Jump" is just a taster for the emotional motherlode that follows, a dreamy and funky song entitled "I Missed the Bus." This cut starts out as a narrative of a manic depressive. The solid metaphor of missing the bus for school (again relating to the childhood themes of "Jump") is used in the song to underscore the character's struggle to avoid missing out on life.

But as the song gains steam, it changes into an optimistic allegory. By the end of the song, almost six minutes and countless mood changes later, Kris realizes that he wants to be a part of the human condition. He's not just satisfied watching life from the sidelines, he wants to ride the bus and drive the bus! "I missed the bus," laments Kris about his past follies, but recovering quickly he exclaims, "but it's something that I'll never ever do again!" In these six minutes, Kris and Kris outline both the plight of Generation X and some possible solutions. The media has beaten twenty-somethings into believing that their future is bleak, but Kris Kross provides an anthem for today's youth that begs to differ.

It is not very often that an album that defines a generation comes out. Totally Krossed Out is such an album. This CD is every bit a classic, easily joining the ranks of Pink Floyd's Dark Side of the Moon and Bob Dylan's Highway 61. It comes along at a time when it is most needed, in the wake of Cobain's suicide. Surely he would have been equally blown away by this epochal album. Needless to say, buy this immediately!

N.W.A.
The B Sides
RUTHLESS RECORDS

by Larry Allen
staff critic

Hot spot: "F--- Tha Police Again!"

Low blow: "Stupid Suckaa"

Bottom line: This one is definitely going to be a classic for you hardcore fans.

Before Tupac began his "Thug Life" or Ice T even dreamed of killing cops, N.W.A. (Niggas With Attitudes) innovated the rap scene with what would be called "gangster rap." This legendary squad is back one last time in honor of their late leader, Eazy-E, with more of the raw lyrics that started it all.

Eazy-E, also known as Eric Wright, died Sunday, March 26, after a recent diagnosis of full-blown AIDS. Unfortunately, his death stunted the rapper's intentions to promote AIDS awareness.

The remaining N.W.A. members, M.C. Wren, Yella, Dr. Dre and Ice Cube, decided to put all past differences aside and resurrect selected unreleased tracks. However, if you think The B Sides is just a low-budget reject cut, think again! These are the type of jams that got 2 Live Crew "Banned in the U.S.A." With controversial tracks like "F--- Tha Police Again!" and "Straight Backta Compton," N.W.A. is sure to rekindle those adolescent primal urges that led many of the group's members to prosperous solo careers.

On a positive note, it should be noted that the so-called "gangsters" will donate all B Side proceeds to benefit AIDS research and awareness.

Perhaps N.W.A. is not a group of thugs after all. Maybe we should all look at them as ordinary people (humanitarians, if you will) with a few harsh realities. Who knows? One day it may be acceptable to say "I want to be just like N.W.A."

On the real... PEACE TO EAZY—you will be missed.

Beef Wellington
Beef Wellington's
Greatest Hits
MOM AND POP'S RECORDS

by Brian Davis
staff critic

Hot spot: "Degraded Lady"
Low blow: "In a Good Mood"

Bottom line: Combination of Duke Ellington, U2, Us3, and Dignable Planets

This addition to the jazz-pop-rap-blues blend genre of modern music employs the latest mixing techniques to combine samples of Duke Ellington's famous jazz and the soulful British music of Beef Wellington.

Many of these songs could easily become popular within the college scene, considering the wide range of interests to which the music appeals. "Degraded Lady," by Beef himself, is a spinoff of the Duke's classic "Sophisticated Lady." This song portrays women as the lower life-forms they are treated as today. Beef attributes this change not to chauvinistic men, but rather as a direct result of the feminist movement. Another great song, "Take The 'F' Train," addresses the modern urban problems of the inner city, including heavy traffic, noise and pollution. This track includes great samples from the Duke's "Take The 'A' Train." The rolling bass line is provided by the excellent acoustic bassist Hayes Alvin himself.

Not surprisingly, this European-American mix of vocals with a British accent and a hip-hop beat with Ellington samples makes quite a pleasing album. Certainly, this is a group everyone will be hearing more about in the future.

G Funk Boyz
G Funk Boyz
ARISTA RECORDS

by David Baker
Time-Out editor

Hot spot: "Litigate" and "Runnin' Wit Few Breaks"
Low blow: "This Soprano Saxophonist"

Bottom line: The combination of G Funk with the saxophone is smooth and utterly irresistible.

A union between two of the best artists of the decade could be nothing but wonderful.

On G Funk Boyz, rapper Warren G and soprano saxophone wizard Kenny G combine their talents to produce a landmark album which should live in the hearts of listeners for years to come.

"Litigate" features smooth, yet intense lyrics backed by a powerful saxophone rhythm. Warren G sings of his desire to be an attorney and to prosecute criminals. Kenny G just plays the saxophone. Peabo Bryson sings one song on G Funk Boyz, "By the Time This Ho is Older," which explores relationships in the "G Funk Era."

Of the union with "the other G," Warren G says, "It was only natural for me and Kenny to come together."

Kenny G says: "I'm ready to try new things. I feel comfortable again with G Funk Boyz. This is what I've always wanted to do."

With a best-selling album, rotation on MTV and world-wide popularity, surely both Gs are bound to be legends for the world.

The Time-Out Band
Booty Child
PATRICK RILEY RECORDS

by Meraj K. Anas
staff critic

Hot Spot: "Pimps R Us"
Low Blow: "She Ain't Nothin' but Jailbait"

Bottom Line: Possibly the best and definitely the most unique album of all time!

Critically acclaimed as the most impressive group to hit the music world, the Time-Out Band (known in most countries as the Finger Lickin's) has it all.

The band, idolized by millions worldwide, consists of Larry Allen, vocalist; Levi Nayman, lead guitarist; Chris Nixon, rhythm guitarist; Brian Davis, harmonica/bassist; and Meraj

Anas, percussionist. The group is managed by Dave Baker, who is cool. Kurt Cobain said before his death: "The Time-Out Band is not your ordinary band. They don't stick to one type of music."

Booty Child begins with a hip-hop rap song titled "What the Word, Homey!" Allen's superb lyrics are highlighted by a greasy bass line from Brian and a wonderful guitar solo by Nayman. The song actually has deep meaning, relating to the cancellation of the television show, In Living Color.

A collection of rock songs follows. The first song, "Blunt Packer," is highlighted by Nixon, the rhythm guitarist, and by Davis, playing possibly the greatest harmonica solo ever while playing the bass guitar.

The next song, "Moby Prick," of course is known for Anas's famous four-hour drum solo. The track, however, is shortened to seventy-four minutes. Included on the album is a popular rocked-up version of Whitney Houston's "I Will Always Love You."

Eddie Vedder of Pearl Jam says: "At first, we just wanted to establish ourselves as the band of the 90s. Then, we wanted to make the impact of the Beatles. Now, we just want to be like the Time-Out Band. They've done it all."

A CLOSER LOOK

In two years, when Clemson becomes an all-female military college, the football program will continue with all female players.

Ford back to coach Tigers

by Mike McCombs
staff writer

In a surprising turn of events yesterday, Athletic Director Bobby Robinson announced that Danny Ford will be returning as head football coach at Clemson University.

At a press conference at Jervy Athletic Center, Robinson stated that Tommy West would step down as head coach and assume his old position of linebackers coach under Ford. "Coach Ford will assume his duties immediately and will be on the sidelines for the Orange and White game," said Robinson.

Danny Ford last coached the Tigers in the fall of 1989. He resigned in February of 1990 following an of any wrong-doing, a philosophical difference with former Clemson University President Max Lennon ended Ford's stay in Tigertown.

"Coach Ford is my friend. We're like brothers," said Robinson. "I've gone to the wall for him before, and I'd be more than willing to do it again." He added, "I'm happy to be fortunate enough to be able work with him again."

The Tiger reached coach Ford for comment at his favorite hang out, The Esso Club. "I reckon I'm happy to be back as y'all's football coach," said Ford. "It'll be a hoot to work with Bobby again."

Coach West, Ford's close friend and assistant, volunteered to step down when told of the possibility of Ford's return. West was first a Ford assistant from 1982-1989. He will now return for his second term as a Ford assistant.

"They told me that if I wanted, they could offer me another job with the University, but shucks, you only get to work with Danny Ford once," said West.

Clemson football has been reeling since the departure of coach Ken Hatfield prior to the 1993 Peach Bowl. Hatfield's teams Matt LeCroy swings and misses for the last time as a Tiger. As a result of the program cut, the highly-touted freshman has verbally committed to to play for the Tar Heels next season.

Athletic dept. cuts baseball

by Jon Cooper and Meredith Thomas
staff writers

At a press conference late Thursday evening, head coach Jack Leggett announced that due to baffling circumstances, Clemson University will be folding its No. 1 ranked baseball team.

Publicly, the University cites lack of fan support as grounds for cutting the program. According to Leggett, student support is not the problem. However, paying fans are just not coming out in numbers that make continuing the season feasible. Rather than charging students to attend the game, the athletic department feels it is best to fold the program immediately.

"We're really upset about the situation," said outfielder Shane Monahan. "I guess I'll just join the replacement players. I wish my career here at Clemson didn't have to end this way."

Although lack of fan support was cited by the University as the primary cause for the program's cancellation, investigation by The Tiger has revealed a program full of corruption. Apparently, players trade uniforms several times a game, allowing the best players to bat more often. A player on the team, who wished not to be identified, told The Tiger that sometimes Monahan would bat 12 or 13 times a game.

Also, Matt McColl, a Clemson student, told The Tiger, "At one game against George Mason, I turned to my friend and said, 'Hey! That's not Seth Brizek.' I didn't know who the

Wrestling reinstated

New coach plans to bring past glory
back to program

by Mike Serijan
staff writer

In a surprise move by the Clemson University athletic department, the wrestling program has again been added to the intercollegiate sports program.

But the announcement paled in comparison to the naming of the new coach. Clemson University Athletic Director Bobby Robinson introduced the new coach in front of 250 media reporters yesterday in Littlejohn Coliseum.

"Our new coach has been a long-time Clemson wrestling fan," Robinson said. "His knowledge of the sport is unparalleled in the industry. We are pleased he has come to save the program."

The lights then went out in Littlejohn Coliseum, and the theme music from the 2001 screamed through the sound system. The doors to the tunnel opened and the man that emerged was none other than "Nature Boy" Ric Flair.

"First off," Flair bellowed, "I just have to say WHOOOOOO! The Nature Boy is here, and I am taking this program straight to the top. I've been a champion all my life, and success just follows me wherever I go."

A mixed reaction filled the room. Some reporters could not believe this guy was for real, while others were amazed that Ric Flair would actually take the time to coach college wrestlers.

"Ric, I have followed your career from the NWA to the WWF and to the WCW, and I must compliment you on your 12 World Championship titles," said Dan Foster of The Greenville News. "I was wondering though, how you plan to make the transition from professional wrestling back to amateur wrestling?"

"Well Dan," said Flair, "the Nature Boy has all the scientific moves needed to succeed in this sport. I will stress the fundamental take downs and holds that will wear down the opponent. We're going to dish out a lot of punishment. I want other teams to fear stepping on the mat with us."

Sophomore wrestler Brendan Buckley expressed an eagerness to start practices. "I can't wait to start. Ric Flair is the best wrestler of all time. To have him as a coach is a dream come true."

Flair is 41 years old and has 25 years of wrestling experience. A native of Charlotte, North Caro-

This Week in Clemson

- Baseball - Cancelled!

CU's Ford and Flair

The past two weeks have brought about some outstanding events as well as some horrid events. While two new coaches have come along, the Tigers have lost a coach as well as the inaugural season of the Carolina Panthers.

Danny Ford, who coached the football team from 1978-1989, has come back to restore the glory that he built during his 11 years. His overall record at Clem-

by Billy Ebner
interim sports editor

son was an outstanding 96-29-4.

I believe that this will give a big, emotional boost to a football team that is going through a rebuilding stage. I'm not guaranteeing a national championship or anything like that, but a 10-1 record with Ford as head coach sounds reasonable to me.

Ric Flair, who is a 12-time World Champion in professional wrestling, wants to continue Clemson's wrestling tradition after a one-year hiatus. Flair dominated professional wrestling for more than a decade and will be known as one of the greatest wrestlers of all time.

Although Flair's wrestling ability is not doubted, I have to question his coaching ability. He has not coached a day in his life, and yet Athletic Director Bobby Robinson felt that it would be a good idea. Then again, Flair has been an underdog for most of his career. Coaching the Tigers to an NCAA Championship is just the type of upset that Flair could pull off.

In gaining two coaches, Clemson has lost one of its best, baseball coach Jack Leggett. The baseball program, which was dropped in favor of wrestling, came as a surprise to many Clemson officials. At the time when the baseball program was dropped, the Tigers were #1 in the nation. It is not yet fully understood why this has occurred.

Unfortunately, this situation has left coach Leggett jobless. Although he has been offered the job as coach for the USC baseball team, Leggett does not plan to accept their offer.

"There is no way that I would ever coach at USC," said Leggett. "Their program needs a lot of improvement, and I would be wasting my time. I will probably just take a few years off and then weigh my options."

Another horrible event came when the Panthers decided to play their first season in Williams Brice stadium instead of Death Valley. Coach Dom Capers wanted fried chicken to be sold at Panther games, and Athletic Director Robinson simply refused to let chicken be sold in Death Valley.

In this case, I definitely agree with Bobby Robinson's decision. Selling fried chicken would be an outrage to every Clemson athlete as well as every Clemson fan.

While most Panther players are okay with the idea, former Clemson football player Larry Ryans is highly upset.

"I can not believe that we are going to play in a stadium where they're mascot is a chicken," said Ryans. "Selling chicken at Death Valley is such an idiotic idea. I am now beginning to consider an early retirement."

Losing the Panthers is a major loss for Clemson University, but it is a loss that we as sports fans will eventually overcome. It's just going to take some time.

Along with the bad times come the good times. It is a fact of life that every sports fan must face. It is these bad times that make us stronger people.

Barnes, Smith to duke it out

by Jon Cooper
staff writer

Forget the ACC Tournament. Forget the Final Four. Only a month away is the sporting event of the century. Rick "The Pitbull" Barnes and Dean "The Ego" Smith will go head-to-head in a bare-knuckles boxing match on Saturday, April 28, in the Charlotte Coliseum.

The Pay-Per-View event is long overdue for those fans who remember the earlier confrontations between Barnes and Smith in both the conference tournament and the regular season. Only this time, neither the officials nor the police will have to restrain them.

"I'm sick and tired of that whiny, senile old man always getting his way," said Barnes, an ex-wrestler. "After he's lying on his back and spitting out his teeth, he'll think twice about messing with the Tigers again."

Smith responded, "I just want to teach that young punk some manners."

The ACC's own Lenny Wirtz will officiate the bout, which is slated for 10 rounds.

"I'm honored that they felt I was the most impartial and fair man for the job," commented Wirtz. "I just hope no one gets severely injured."

Don King, who will promote the fight, called this the biggest fight since Tyson versus Spinks.

"A fight of this magnitude, a battle of young versus old, a contest of North versus South will be forever remembered as the Carnage in the Carolinas," said King,

Michael Chase/ad production manager

Next month's Rick Barnes and Dean Smith boxing match is being billed as "Carnage in the Carolinas."

who continued for at least another 45 minutes in rhymes that made no sense but sounded really cool.

The ACC league office refuses to endorse the event. However, they are not condemning it either. Sources close to The Tiger stated league officials feel that this may be the only way to resolve the feud between the coaches.

Las Vegas odds-makers have made Barnes a 20:1 favorite, and while most are betting on an early knock out, some expect Barnes to drag the fight out and make Smith suffer. Only time will tell.

For now, sporting fans everywhere can only wait until the words "Let's get ready to ruuummmble!" echo through Charlotte Coliseum.

Panthers' 1st season moved to Columbia from Clemson

file photo

Though Death Valley was ready for them, the Panthers have opted to play their inaugural season in South Carolina's Williams Brice stadium.

by Macy Chatneuff
staff writer

In a shocking move made this past week, Carolina Panthers head coach Dom Capers announced the football team will not play at Death Valley next fall, but at William Brice Stadium in Columbia.

"We wanted fried chicken to be sold at our games," said coach Capers. "Since Clemson University has a natural dislike for chicken, we knew it would be a hard sell. We told them that if they didn't sell chicken at Panther games, we were going to leave. To quote Athletic Director Bobby Robinson, 'there's the door, you can see yourself out.'"

Since ticket sales have been low, team members have decided that to raise money for new uniforms they will sell chicken after each home game.

"No Southerner can resist the taste of chicken," said quarterback Frank Reich. "No matter what kind of Sunday football afternoon he has had."

The team plans to sell fried chicken, roast chicken, barbecue chicken, buffalo chicken wings and, of course, deep-fried chicken livers. These are Mike Fox's, defense lineman, favorite varieties. He learned to cook them from his mother.

"My mama taught me to deep-fry them in lard, because it soaks in the flavor," said Fox.

Athletic Director Bobby Robinson is sad to see the Panthers go but believes that it is their loss.

"We're sorry to see the Panthers leave, but we just won't have any chicken here," said Bobby Robinson. "If they want to go to that junior college, then so be it. It's their loss."

Even though the Panthers won't be playing at Death Valley next fall, there has been a strong interest by many music groups. They are wanting to fill up the time slot on Sunday afternoons.

"The red tape had already been cut for this plan when we were preparing the stadium for the Panthers," said Robinson. "This new interest will still help us make a great deal of money while entertaining the students."

The tickets for these concerts will also be the same reduced price as the tickets for the Panthers home games, thus drawing a large crowd.

The only good news about the situation was from Jolene at Knickerbocker's.

"We overcharged those Gamecocks for all the Panthers paraphernalia, and now I can buy a house at the lake," said Jolene.

Night games in Tigers' future

by Jay Longshore
staff writer

In his first move after returning as Clemson head coach, Danny Ford said let there be lights. During the 1995 football season there will be three night home games. The Florida State game on September 9, the Virginia game on September 23 and the North Carolina game on November 4 will be played under the lights in Death Valley.

"Night games add an electrifying atmosphere to the field, players and especially the fans," said athletic center chairman Harry Ross Jr. "The huge towers of glowing bulbs slowly build their energy from the roaring crowd. Athletic buses screech into position behind the hillside scoreboard."

"The band goes off jamming 'Tiger Rag', and the fans explode with excitement as the players race down the hill and onto the field."

Soon, the brilliance of the lights contrasts against the black night sky, turning the entire field and stadium into a dramatic cathedral of smash-mouth football for four frenzied quarters."

There has not been a home game like this since the October 23, 1992, match-up between the Tigers and the Florida State Seminole. Coincidentally, the Seminoles will be the first team to play the Tigers under the Death Valley lights in the 1995 season. The Florida State kickoff is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. as is the kickoff for the Virginia game.

Kickoff time is 8:00 p.m. for the final night game of the season versus the North Carolina Tarheels. This is also the first Clemson Homecoming game to be played under the lights.

"In the past, IPTAY members have been the strongest reason for maintaining the day games," said Clemson's ACC scheduling representative Bruce Rasmussen. "A lot of members commute from other states to watch the games and don't like driving home during the middle of the night."

Students have been petitioning for years to have afternoon or night games. Many students have found it difficult to rise and shine for noon games after a long Friday night of extra-curricular activities.

"Night games get students hyped-up much more than day games," said junior Brandon Younginer. "It gives us a better chance to wake up and do a little drinking which always seems to make people yell a little louder."

Adding night games to Clemson's schedule should add to the football excitement sweeping through Tiger town next year.

Lady Tigers survive scare

The Lady Tigers beat each other as much as they beat Duke last week in a rough-and-tumble match that ended in a 5-4 Clemson victory.

by Emma Peetz
staff writer

For the Lady Tigers' tennis team, spring is the season of silliness. When coach Andy Johnston wanted to forfeit the match against Duke last weekend, his players wouldn't stand for it.

While running for a wide forehead, Clemson's No. 1 player Jan Barrett crashed hard into teammate Shannon King playing on the next court.

"I couldn't believe she didn't get out of the way," said Barrett. "I had the winner down the line."

With Barrett on the ground and King only points away from winning her doubles match, Coach Johnston called for a 15-minute injury time.

"Shannon was able to get up, but Jan was out cold," said Johnston. "She had a lump on her head the size of a golfball! Fortunately, Jan's never-say-die attitude brought her back to life."

She eventually ousted her Duke opponent 6-2,7-5.

But that wasn't the end of it. In a third set tie-breaker, King forgot to call "mine" on a volley and subsequently swung her racquet right into Melissa Odom's face.

"It was crazy!" said King later. "Odom survived my toughest volley and finished the match with me."

Ironically, 12th-ranked Duke threw in the towel with the revival of Odom. The pair clinched the match for the team 5-4 when they closed out the tie-breaker 10-8.

"They play just like real Tigers," laughed Johnston. "Somedays they just got to prey on each other!"

Sapp headed for third sport

by Billy Ebner
interim sports editor

Patrick Sapp has decided to try out for the men's track team next year.

Sapp plans to play football until football season ends. After that, he is going to try out for the track team.

Sapp never ran track in high school but believes that he can be a good contributor to the track team. He feels that his blazing speed and outstanding athletic ability will give him a really good chance of making the track team.

"All I can say is that I'm going to give it my best shot," said Sapp. "I would really like to run the 55m high hurdles or try out for the pole vault. I just want Coach Pollock to give me a chance."

Sapp has many doubters, who believe that he should stay on the football field and off the track field. An unnamed trackster believes that having Sapp on the track team would be an insult to Clemson athletics.

"I cannot believe that he is actually considering trying out for the team," said the unnamed source. "He does not have what it takes to be on the men's track team. Patrick Sapp is only going to do one thing and that's embarrass himself."

While other people on the track team may have other opinions, the opinion that really matters is that of coach Bob Pollock.

"I really don't know what to think," said Pollock. "I'll let him try out, but I'm not going to guarantee anything."

If Sapp makes the team, track will be the third sport that he's played in one year.

"It would be great to become a three-sport athlete," said Sapp. "Becoming a three-sport athlete was one of my goals when I first came to Clemson."

"I'm happy to know that y'all think I can equal what Kenny did here," said Ford. "I ain't sure if no one can do that though."

Robinson worked hard to complete a deal with Ford. As compensation for the farm that Ford was forced to sell in 1990, the University will sign over the president's mansion to Ford.

In addition to his undisclosed salary, Ford will receive 25 percent of all students' tuition and a portion of ticket sales from all Clemson athletics.

Finally, as stipulated in Ford's contract, the student radio station will be converted into a 24-hour bluegrass station.

"I was disappointed to lose my house," said acting President Phil Prince. "But when Bobby told me to have my stuff out in 48 hours, there was nothing I could do."

Ford was first named coach prior to the 1978 Gator bowl. Over the next 11 years, he amassed a record of 96-28-4. During that period, Clemson won five conference titles, finished in the top 25 seven times, earned a 6-2 bowl record and a national championship in 1981.

The Tigers endured two NCAA probation during Ford's tenure, the first of which began after the championship season and lasted through 1984.

When asked about Ford's return, Frank Howard, "The Legend," said, "It'll be great to have a buddy to fish and chew with again."

In place of the baseball program, the University will be bringing back the wrestling program which has been cleared of all wrong-doing by the NCAA. The new wrestling coach will be former wrestling champion and Charlotte native Ric Flair.

The team will start practicing again as soon as it is cleared of its apparent violations.

As for the baseball team, players are already being contacted by other schools for transfer. Coach Roberts of UNC has reportedly contacted several players to talk about transferring to UNC. Freshman designated hitter Matt LeCroy has already verbally committed to Coach Roberts.

"They're a bunch of geeks up there," said LeCroy. "But at least I'll get to play the sport I love."

•DID YOU KNOW... that over the past year Counseling and Psychological Services (CAPS) has seen an increased number of students with alcohol or related problems often unrecognized prior to counseling assessment. Students unaware of their drinking problem may continue until negative consequences arise that may include: poor academic performance, public intoxication, DUI and violent behavior which can result in a variety of losses including death. A 1990 national survey published by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services indicated that 41% of the nation's college students engaged in a bout of heavy drinking (five or more drinks in a row). Almost 4% will drink every single day and only 11% will refrain from drinking at all. Research also indicates all of society is at risk when problematic drinking is part of the environment. ## Ironing Out That Run-Down Feeling.

By R. Cameron Schauf, Food Services Administrator

Studies show that up to 80 percent of college women may not consume enough iron to meet the Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA). If you are feeling tired and run-down it may be due to a deficiency of iron.

FUNCTIONS OF IRON

Iron is an important part of the blood. It is needed to build red blood cells during times of growth and repair. In the blood, as a part of hemoglobin, iron is needed to carry oxygen from the lungs to the tissues.

WHO IS AT RISK FOR IRON DEFICIENCY?

Children and Young Adults

More iron is especially needed during growth.

Menstruating Young Women

Iron is lost during monthly periods; therefore, women need more iron than men.

Endurance Athletes

Iron deficiency dramatically impairs physical performance by reducing the oxygen carrying capacity of the blood. Iron can also be lost through the sweat or through blood losses of the G-I tract. Strenuous aerobic activity can cause destruction of red blood cells as well.

Popeye Without His Spinach

This sailor's strength is also his Achilles heel. The secret to good health is a balanced diet. Popeye's reliance on a single source for all his vitamins and nutrients makes him much more susceptible to deficiency when that source is unavailable. Besides, canned spinach is nasty.

SYMPTOMS OF IRON DEFICIENCY

Experiencing a combination of these may indicate iron deficiency:

- Fatigue and weakness
- Apathy
- Pale or dry skin
- Impaired physical performance
- Shortened attention span
- Consistently losing fights to Bluto

IRON INTAKE

Recommended Dietary Allowances:

- Men (age 19+) 10 mg/day
- Women (age 19-51) 15 mg/day
- Women (age 51+) 10 mg/day

INFLUENCING IRON ABSORPTION

The amount of iron that is actually absorbed by your body is dependent not only on how much you take in, but also on where it came from and what you ate with it.

- Vitamin C (found in citrus fruits and some vegetables) increases the body's absorption of iron.
- Tea and coffee interfere with the absorption of iron.
- Meat, fish, and poultry contain the most readily absorbable iron. They also enhance the absorption of iron from non-meat sources.
- While sucking spinach through a pipe seemed to work for Popeye it is not generally accepted as a healthy practice.

If you do not feel you are getting enough iron in your diet, you may benefit from taking an iron supplement. Ask your doctor if you are concerned.

Finals Fitness!

By R. Cameron Schauf, Food Services Administrator

Your health is a delicate balance between consuming a proper diet and exercising. For many, when being at their best is most important—during finals—their diet and exercise habits become irregular and unbalanced. Often when studying for finals one may skip meals, snack more, drink more coffee and soda, sleep fewer hours, and exercise less. These behaviors can actually affect how you perform during an exam. Being at your best—well-nourished and well-rested—can help you get the grade you want. Final exams are one month away. It is important to establish good exercise and eating habits now so you can be at your best when exams hit.

FINALS FITNESS HELPFUL HINTS

1. Plan ahead; try to avoid "pulling an all-nighter."
2. Get plenty of rest; don't alter your regular sleeping pattern. (Unless, of course, your "regular sleeping pattern" is to stay up all night partying and then sleep in class.)
3. Don't skip meals; take a break from studying (or procrastinating) to enjoy a hot, nutritious meal.
4. Limit the amount of caffeine you consume. Too much caffeine will affect your concentration and sleep; choose fruit juices, water, or herbal tea instead.
5. Make your snacks nutritious. Munching on popcorn, fresh vegetables and fruits, or ready-to-eat cereals will give you extra nutrition without extra calories.
6. Take an exercise break. Exercising will help you relax and concentrate better.

AUTHOR'S NOTE

By the time this column appears in The Tiger, I will have assumed my new job as Director of Dining Services at Bryn Mawr College in Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania. I have enjoyed my stay at Clemson University and the opportunity to write this column. Remember, the true key to a healthy and happy life is personal dedication to taking care of yourself. You hold the key to a successful personal fitness program. As my brother Kenny is fond of saying: "If I cheat I'm only cheating myself, and if I don't care, why should it bother you?" Don't cheat yourself, eat wisely and exercise.

College Life: A Few Things To Know

KNOW: which off-campus bookstore will buy back your used $45 textbooks for more than 25¢ each.

KNOW: which "30-minutes-or-it's-free" pizza place always takes exactly 31 minutes.

KNOW: which evil, quarter-eating laundromat machines to avoid.

KNOW THE CODE,<sup>SM</sup>
IT ALWAYS COSTS LESS THAN 1-800-COLLECT.<sup>SM</sup>

Hey, on college campuses those "in the know" are the ones who rule. And it's not just about being smart in the classroom, it's about being wise with your wallet as well. So if you want a great low price on a collect call, just dial 1 800-CALL-ATT. It always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT. Always.

There are lots of tricky things for you to learn at college, but here's something that's easy: KNOW THE CODE, and save the person on the other end some serious money. You'll be glad you did.
